

SOCI 250C : Conflict Resolution in Modern Society

Provides an overview of theories and research concerning the nature of conflict and methods for resolving conflict. The foundation of the course is social systems theory; the course examines conflicts among social institutions and conflicts among diverse populations. The effects of conflict on the individual are considered. The course provides the student/practitioner with the theoretical framework for analyzing and resolving conflict. This course does not meet the minimum Social Science requirement for NHTI's associate degrees or professional certificate programs.

Credits 3

Lab/Practicum/Clinical Hours 0

Lecture Hours 3